

We the People to be or not to be

Lyubomir BG*

Engineer, Independent Innovative Ideas Researcher, Bulgaria

*Corresponding author:

Berov G Lyubomir,
Engineer, Independent Innovative Ideas Researcher,
Smolyan 4700, Bulgaria,
E-mail: my_kaly1@mbox.contact.bg

Received: 21 Sep 2022

Accepted: 01 Oct 2022

Published: 07 Oct 2022

J Short Name: AJSCCR

Copyright:

©2022 Lyubomir BG, This is an open access article distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution License, which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and build upon your work non-commercially.

Citation:

Lyubomir BG. We the People to be or not to be. Ame J Surg Clin Case Rep. 2022; 5(10): 1-2

Keywords:

Pandemic; World War; Russia; Human Civilization; Ukraine

1. Abstract

Humanity has seen and lived through many wars. But in the current situation there is something new, something that has never happened before, something that, I think, gives us great hope that our world has jumped over the catastrophic scenario and will continue to exist and evolve. And this is the unity with which almost all of the rest of the world has sided with the Ukrainian people since the first days of the Russian invasion.

2. Short Communication

Dear reader, are we, humans, today 9/08/2022, facing the decisive phase of another test for existence and, is in front of us again the question “to be or not to be”? I think so. All signs are there! At first sight, it seems that the third world war is at our doorstep. To demonstrate this, let us review the facts of the recent days. First, the war in Ukraine continues unabated with no end in sight. The entire democratic world is helping Ukraine, but apparently this is sufficient only to keep the war going. In fact, I think that this war cannot end until the current intellectual level of the people of Russia changes radically. Next, China is conducting military maneuvers next to Taiwan and has canceled their previous plans to end those. At the same time, the US demonstrated real and firm support for Taiwan. Next, the tension between Israel and Palestine could lead to a war at any moment. In addition, there are also a number of local wars in the world right now. The opinion that the use of nuclear weapons is a matter of time is increasingly creeping into the world media. In practice, with the bombing of the Zaporozhye nuclear power plant, which is the largest in Europe, we can consider that nuclear weapons are already in use.

However, Dear reader, is the situation so hopeless after all? Is a third world war really inevitable? I don't think so. I think there is a glimmer of hope based on the conclusions reached in my article “Test for Existence”. Let me first recap here the key takeaways from that article: “Test for Existence” develops the hypothesis that the evolution of all humanoid civilizations on our planet that ever existed, including ours, have been governed by a higher Intellect. To make this hypothesis more understandable, I imagine that these are other higher civilizations, most likely alien and living outside our planet. Their intervention in the evolution of the human civilizations happens when the humanoid civilizations grossly deviated from the correct path of development, and irreversibly violated the ideas of humanism. When this happened, a worldwide catastrophe, caused in most cases by a collision with a large asteroid, was used to wipe out the then dominant human civilization.

To prove my hypothesis, I have referred to many scientifically confirmed instances where huge asteroids have struck the Earth and destroyed almost all living organisms, including the humanoid civilization that happened to exist at that time. However, in the cases when the violations of the ideas of humanism were reversible and it was possible to correct the course, the higher Intellect took different actions, which were typically a combination of pandemics and wars. Those would sometimes wipe out 60 to 70 percent of the Earth population would in just three or four years. These events would lead to deep subconscious changes, both at the level of each one of the surviving people as well as at the level of the organism of the human civilization as a whole. As a result, the humanity would continue to exist, but following a new, corrected course. Until now, these changes, even if clearly inevitable, have always been extremely painful from the perspective of the individual human being, and mankind has found it very difficult to accept that inevitability.

Dear reader, all this may sound very rude and inhumane to you, but the same rules of existence apply to the billions of cells that make up our organisms! Very often some of those cells, and sometimes huge groups forming a sick organ, have to die so that the body can continue to live. And each of us is actually a separate cell in the huge organism of our civilization.

This brings me to the ray of hope I see currently. How do I envision the road ahead? We are all at the verge of profound and painful changes, which, once accomplished, would bring most of us back to the ideas of humanism. Currently, these ideas are grossly violated by Russia, North Korea, and, to some extent, China.

Let's now focus specifically on the countries involved in the conflict in Ukraine.

First, Russia. For me, this is one of the most regressive countries in terms of the development of its civilization. The Russian society suffers a complete information blockade with no public discussions allowed, and all politicians who think differently persecuted. As a result, the Russian people have withdrawn into their private lives, and their will to protest has fallen sharply in recent years. Huge changes are needed to wake up the Russian society. One way for those changes to happen, I believe, is by the sharp decline in the standard of living of the population, which will inevitably happen if this war goes on long enough. In different words, now or later a revolution is coming to Russia again, and this is the only way for Russia to become civilized. And until that happens, I emphasize, again, this war will continue one way or another. This is the necessary and inevitable correction that is coming and which the leaders of Russia quite deliberately do not see and do not understand because they are simply being manipulated by the higher forces. However, for the ordinary people in Russia and Ukraine, this means only incredible suffering. But this suffering will gradually change them and introduce them to a new world, more humane and happier.

Now, let's focus on the Western Europe and the USA. Do those societies need radical changes? Obviously yes! They consume more and more and forget that everything around them, including our environment, also has a right to live. Huge personal yachts, castles and many other unthinkable and completely unnecessary comforts, incredible gluttony and what not are completely contrary to the ideas of humanism. And whenever we grossly violate those ideas, forced correction awaits us. I am sure that on this occasion each of us remembers the legend of Sodom and Gomorrah. But in the current situation there is something new, something that has never happened before, something that I think gives us great hope that our world has leapfrogged a global catastrophe and will continue to exist and develop. And this ray of hope is the unity with which the people of Western Europe, North America, Japan, and Australia stood by the side of the Ukrainian people from the very first days of the Russian invasion. Yes, we need radical changes, but this unity shows that we have already started those ourselves, that they have occurred at a deep subconscious level, both individually as well as in the organism of our civilization as a whole. The current situation shows that one of those changes, a very important and very essential one, namely, the abandonment of a war as a means of bringing about the difficult and painful changes both for the individual human being and for the society as a whole, is about to be realized. Or, in other words, in order to fully integrate with the extraterrestrial civilizations that are our teachers, we will not be forced to go to war with each other. For now, though, it's still just a glimmer of hope for me.

Let us now summarize the current situation in terms of our discussion so far. Russia needs deep, very deep changes on the road to humanism. The Russian people and society can achieve those changes only if they were to relive the horrors of war. But there must be a war. To begin with, its leaders have been indoctrinated with the idea that they are all-powerful, but have insufficient territory to command the entire world, and this needs to be corrected. And so the war with Ukraine begins. How does the majority of the rest of the world, which is far ahead on the road to humanism, react? Its leaders, who must have consciously or subconsciously come to the ideas we discussed so far, have understood that they are assigned the role is to ensure that the war continues long enough. And so they begin helping Ukraine. But how is it possible to reconcile the military aid with the level of humanism that our world has already achieved? The only approach is if the aid is material and not accompanied by human sacrifices. I think this is the reason for this kind of support in the current situation.

Dear reader, do you think this explanation gives a clearer and truer picture of what is happening now?

References

1. Greene, Brian. The Hidden Reality. 2011.
2. Ceram, C.W. Gotter, Graber Und Gelehrt. 1967.
3. Castaneda, Carlos. The Art of Dreaming. 1993.
4. Stephen W. Hawking. A Brief History of Time. 1973.
5. Ole J Benedictow, The Black Death. 2005; 1346-1353.
6. Berov Lyubomir, Test for Existence. 2019.